

Please urge the responsible persons to not undermine the Indiana Telephone Privacy Protection laws. These laws have helped me personally because I work night shifts and used to be constantly awakened by rude telephone solicitors who even called back when I hung up!! On the average day I would be awakened three times and on average my home recieved three calls in the evening when I wearily tried to have dinner with my family. Four to six unsolicited telemarketing calls per day is disturbing to say the least for a private individual. I believe each state has a right to regulate this kind of activity and I'm glad Indiana has done so.
